DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 49-52 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Beitz et al., EP 634205A (abs).

Beitz et al., teach incorporating an ozone decomposing catalyst onto the equipment in air conditioning and ventilating equipment. It is active at normal ambient temperatures to decompose ozone in an air stream. Beitz et al., do not specifically recite that the catalyst is incorporated onto and outdoor component of the air conditioning or ventilation system, however, they clearly specify that it is functional at ambient or normal atmospheric temperatures, and it is commonly recognized that our atmosphere contains a measurable degree of ozone. As such, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the catalyst of Bietz et al., onto an outdoor component of an air conditioning or ventilating system, such as a condenser, because it would effectively combat the influx of ozone into an air conditioned residence.

Double Patenting

Claims 49-52 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 2 and 22-25 of U.S. Patent No. 5,620,672. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because they are of the same inventive concept with '672 reciting a specific ozone treating catalyst for the apparatus claimed in the instant claims, the ozone decomposing capability of the recited catalyst being well recognized in the art and therefor obvious in it's application. '672 further claims application of the catalyst to components such a fan blades, which are well recognized as part of an outdoor component of an air handling system.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 5/16/2005, with respect to disqualification of the Galligan references under 35 USC 103 (c) based on common ownership at the time of the instant invention, have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejection under 35 USC 103 of claims 49-52 has been withdrawn. An obviousness type double patenting rejection over the claims in the '672 Galligan et al., reference is now deemed proper and set forth.
